

Overview

A related work section is essential to every methods paper. The number one question I get, as a reviewer, from an editor, is: "why does this method differ from A and B published methods." Give me fodder as a reviewer by stating very clearly, generously (to the related methods), and fairly:

- what the field of related work looks like;
- what your method's contributions to the field are in this context.

[incomplete]